

Good Practice: Being a citizen

Provided by: Tallinn Construction School

21st Century Skill connected: being a citizen of one's country, self-determination competence.

How this good practice works:

The student investigates and gets to know and uses national symbols or national motifs in the practical work of vocational education (for example: tiler, painter, sewing).
It is also possible to learn to use leftovers through these tasks.

How this solves problems and/or stimulates social vocational skills:

As it is a creative and optional method, it is well received by students and motivating for practical learning.

How this good practice matches with the connected 21st Century Skills:

This method develops and consolidates being a citizen of one's country, the learner's self-determination competence.
