General information of task for teacher

Title of the task sheet	Social Media Spy
Targeted 21st Century Skill	Critical thinking, growth mindset and communication
Brief description of the competences the students will learn (Including, for example what scientific theory this is based on)	Social Media Spy is about personal leadership. With the game users are invited to engage in conversation about what this means. By being put in the role of employer they have to be critical of who they hire. If they do not, they lose the game. The game is aimed at further developing: Critical thinking, the users develop questions, make connections and evaluate information. Growth mindset, the users self-regulate emotions and try to objectively view all the information. Communication, the users learn about digital communication and what impact it has on applying for a job.
Specialty/Target group (If applicable)	(Young) adults who have a gap to the job market.
Learning outcome(s) for the vocational profession	The main objective is to get insight into what is required to get a job and keep that job.
Tools needed for this lesson plan/ task sheet (If applicable)	Three laminated job descriptions per group, Laminated resumes per group (three initially, with additional provided if needed), Laminated social media pages (corresponding to the resumes) per group (three initially, with extras if needed), 30 blank A3 resumes per group (up to two per group) and 10 markers (up to two per group).
Approximate time to complete the task	3 hours
Suggested more comprehensive methodical guide for doing/carrying out the task (for the teacher or student)	See the provided PowerPoint for the lesson plan you can follow.
License information (if we have a general one on the website, it is not necessary separately for each educational material)	Not necessary

Lesson plan of the task

Warming up	Lay out all the different documents for this game (CV's, social media pictures, etc.). Ask student what they think is important for applying for a job. Nothing is wrong here, it is just a brainstorm.
Explanation for the students at the start	Explain to the students the purpose of the session and also give them the timeline with the different phases. Talk with the students about how they think social media impacts your chances at a job and if they think their social media is representative.
Task description for the students	Participants take on the role of employers, selecting the best candidates for various jobs using fictitious characters and their profiles, including resumes and (simulated) social media platforms, to determine suitability based on skills, experience, and personality. The task involves collectively selecting the right candidates based on their profiles, constructing one or two profiles deemed suitable for available positions, emphasizing collaboration and thoughtful consideration of character attributes. Discuss what employers look for in job applicants (skills, experience, personality), including consideration of social media. First Round: Resumes and Social Media Groups read the job descriptions and discuss resumes. Groups select the character they believe best fits each job. Second Round: Create Own Resume (up to two per group), one good and/or one bad resume Conclusion and Debrief (up to five minutes)
Additional activities for the students	After the training the students can use what was talked about in the session for their own CV's and socials (at least reflect on how they use it now and what changes they'd like to make in the future).
Self-reflection for students	The session has self-reflection moments build in with the students. In different phases the teacher has different reflections with the students.
Feedback on the solution (if applicable) / Possibility to check	The teachers survey how the youngsters react to the session and coaches if necessary. The students give feedback at the end of the training. They will give feedback about the following: I learned things I didn't know yet today (1 not at all and 5 a lot). I can use what I learned today for applying to a job (1 not at all and 5 a lot).
